Nalo Hopkinson born 1960, Jamaica

Jamaican-born author Nalo Hopkinson burst onto the publishing scene in 1997, when her novel Brown Girl in the Ring, set in present-day Toronto and featuring supernatural events drawn from Caribbean folklore, won the Warner Aspect First Novel Contest.

She followed that up with a string of other successes, including 2000's short story collection Skin Folk, which was acclaimed by The New York Times. Her two latest novels are Sister Mine and The Chaos.

Hopkinson lives in Southern California, and is a professor of Creative Writing at the University of California Riverside, where she is a member of a faculty research cluster in Science Fiction.
